Math Kangaroo Statement on the Coronavirus Threat

In response to the coronavirus threat, Math Kangaroo in USA communicates that:

1. The Math Kangaroo (MK) Competition is going take place in the USA as planned on March 19, 2020, in counties where the school schedule has not been limited because of the outbreak.
   - Parents are asked not to bring sick children to the competition and not to come if they are sick themselves.
   - Math Kangaroo Managers are asked to keep question papers at their premises and not to make questions known because in some areas of the country and the word the competition may take place later.
   - Math Kangaroo will provide free access to the questions for all participants along with answer keys after all students have participated.
   - If parents choose not to bring children to the MK center where Math Kangaroo takes place, they can claim a t-shirt, gift and pencil from the MK Manager later, by appointment. Questions will be available through parent accounts.

2. In counties where school activities are on hold because of the coronavirus outbreak, Math Kangaroo is canceled on March 19 and a new date will be set when schools are back to a normal schedule. Here you can see where Math Kangaroo event on March 19 has been canceled...

3. The above is true and obligating for all Math Kangaroo centers, including those at public and private schools and at institutions such as libraries and churches.

4. Math Kangaroo requests MK Directors and MK Managers to communicate regarding the centers where the competition cannot take place on March 19, and to inform us regarding the alternative date when it can be set.

All participants deserve the right to experience Math Kangaroo 2020 Competition. We need to provide safety and follow directives from government agencies.

Stay healthy!
